

The study of archaeology is dedicated to the legacies and traces of past civilizations. Immerse yourself in the life and art of the Paleolithic, the ancient Greeks and Romans, all the way to the end of the Byzantine Empire. Collaboration with related disciplines such as history, philology, art history, earth sciences, biology, and computer science is essential.

The archaeological sciences deal with the material legacies and traces of past cultures. Research is conducted into the living conditions, object and image worlds of pre-modern man from the Palaeolithic Age through the world of the Greeks and Romans to the end of the Byzantine Empire.

Archaeology relies on collaboration with neighboring disciplines, including history, philology, and art history, as well as earth sciences, biology, and computer science. The study program includes three subfields: Prehistoric, Classical and Christian Archaeology.

The Archaeological Sciences program can be selected as a 1-subject or 2-subject bachelor's degree program. In the first two semesters, students are introduced to the methods of archaeology, to scientific work, and to the individual sub-subjects (Prehistory and Early History, Classical Archaeology, Christian Archaeology).

Study contents:

The Bachelor of Arts (B.A.) in Archaeological Sciences is a first professional degree earned after three years of study (six semesters).

However, many professional fields require a Master's degree.

The combined course of study from its three sub-fields is in itself special, because it covers an unusually broad field of archaeology (if one adds the subjects that the University of Bamberg offers in the teaching association, then archaeology can even be studied up to modern times). The studies in Erlangen are particularly practically oriented. With the two large publicly accessible teaching collections, one learns how to work in a museum, but also conducts research on and with original objects.

The great methodological and content-related breadth of archaeological sciences in Erlangen offers graduates of the program good career prospects in the field of monument preservation, in museums and in research itself. On the job market, a doctorate is currently often required as a qualification.

Das Lehrangebot dieser Kombination ist so aufeinander abgestimmt, dass die Fächer in der Regel überschneidungsfrei miteinander kombiniert werden können.

Diese Kombination kann nur nach einer diesbezüglichen Studienberatung studiert werden.

Die Überschneidungsfreiheit kann jedoch nicht garantiert werden.

Die Studierenden tragen selbst die Verantwortung für die Studierbarkeit der Kombination und die Einhaltung der Fristen des § 10.

Der Nachweis einer Studienberatung ist bei der Immatrikulation vorzulegen.
